“ I remember my uncle Jack fondly. When we would visit Grandmama's he would often be there, and though he was an adult and we were children he would engage my brothers and I without condescension. He would take time to play chess, or cards, or talk about some of his "unique" theories concerning UFOs, politics, and other often less than mainstream concepts. He would give us books to read and be willing to discuss their contents. He would show us some of the stones he was working on in his workshop. Dad always seemed to enjoy his brother's company as well, and as brothers are want to do they would sometimes compete, usually in some card game though I do remember one memorable arm wrestling contest that ended in a draw. I know Jack was devoted to his family and we extend our thoughts of love and comfort to them. Thank you, Uncle Jack, for your uniqueness and affection toward us all.
