“ When we were growing up, I was scared of her. We had to share a room. She caught me putting on her makeup and I knew for sure I was going to die right then but she complimented what I had done and helped me with the rest.

As we grew up and matured, We became the best of friends and would find out that we would be thinking of each other at the same time. I miss her so much already and feel like a part of me is missing.
